Children's Corner Galore

With a slow news week, we have decided to take this opportunity to catch up on our big backlog of Children's Corner submissions. While it's true the odd week we did not have anything to publish, we have received an overwhelming response from younger and older children, as well as parents and grandparents alike, telling us how much they enjoy not only seeing their own children's art-work featured but others' as well.

With so many skilled artists here, perhaps a children's art shows can be organized in the future?

While we do plan on returning to featuring one or two pieces on the back page next week, if you're trying to suggest something for children to do after their at-home learning is complete, encourage more submissions. It doesn't have to be a drawing, we have a poem (and a drawing) from 13 year old Darcie Nadjiwon on page 6, we've published stories in the past, and even the occasional business venture - check out Silas' ad on the back page. Anything within reason sent to us will be published, if you don't see it for a couple of weeks it's only because someone else sent something first but we will get to it. Don't forget, you can check out these pictures in colour on islandclippings.com!

To MPP Mike Mantha, Premier Doug Ford and the Algoma District health Unit

Some of the hardest working, lowest paid class workers, in the most exposed to the virus occupations, the people with the least political representation of our well organized society are being denied their proper place in line for the Covid-19 vaccination here in Algoma.

Grocery store clerks and their lumber yard/hardware clerk counterparts need a voice at Queens Park. These brave souls are doing their jobs while the rest of us who can work from home or are retired will, under the present Provincial scheme, get in line ahead of them for the vaccination. That is wrong.

Without these underappreciated dedicated front line workers, the rest of us would starve or be living in a broken down abode. Please do your best to make your fellow MPPs aware of how important the job is that these people do for us.

If you think I have this wrong then try not eating and turn off your hot water tank for a week and then I think you will see my point.

Creature Feature

Spring Peepers

One of the sure fire ways to know spring is here, besides warming temperatures and the arrival of spring migrating birds, is the sounds of the chorus of spring peepers chirping at night. They are one of the first frog species to begin calling in the springtime, sometimes with snow still on the ground. This year they seem louder than ever.

Spring peepers are tiny tan to grey frogs, no bigger than 3cm, with "X" marks on their back. They are mostly nocturnal and live around marsh and wetland areas close to forested areas so they can breed near the water and hibernate under fallen trees in the winter. The males sing trying to attract a mate. They inflate their vocal sacks producing that familiar "peep" noise that sounds like bells that echoes through the night throughout eastern Canada and the US. Their peeps can carry over a kilometre away. The female spring peeper will lay anywhere between 800-1000 eggs in water, which will hatch into tadpoles in 6 - 12 days and will fully turn into an adult frog in two months. They feed on ants, spiders, small beetles and other small bugs.

Spring peepers can survive with their bodies being 70% frozen, their hearts stop pumping and they appear dead. Once the temperature drops below freezing, the frogs will start preparing their bodies for colder temperatures so they can stay alive in the winter. Sugars in the frogs body concentrate in the cells to produce a kind of antifreeze for the frog and is also a source of nourishment as the frog hibernates. Temperatures below 21 F will kill a peeper, so they rely heavily on the surrounding leaf litter and snow cover of the area where it hibernates.

Although they are of least concern, spring peepers can not withstand urbanization and have almost completely disappeared from the Toronto area.

Life

I see the mountains way up high,
I see the eagles flying by,
I see the trees that are so green,
I see the deer that don't want to be seen,
When I look upon the earth,
All around is life's new birth,
Jesus came and life he gave,
For our life we couldn't save,
So when you see life, in the spring,
To Jesus our LORD we'll gladly sing.

Children's Corner

Drawings will most likely resume as the feature on the back page starting next week but again we are more than open to publishing anything else our younger readers would like to see. Check out Silas' interesting advertisement below!

Tiny, ancient book. Quite dirty. You won't really know what the words mean. It might be a good book for kids to play with. It might also be good for people who are trying to learn ancient words. It's probably a fairy's book with magic spells, but it might also be an adult's book with not very interesting stuff. Cost: 2 gold coins and 3 pennies. Contact Silas at 705-206-1945

Send submissions to islandclippings@gmail.com, poems, paintings, pictures, anything you'd like to see on the Children's Corner we will publish. This includes helping little entrepreneurs.
